

The Dutch section is part of the Department of Slavic and Baltic Studies, Finnish, Dutch and German within the Faculty of Humanities. The department has approximately 55 employees and normally around 1,500 students per academic year (for more information, see www.su.se/slabafinety).

Teaching within the Dutch section focuses on the Dutch language in the Netherlands and Belgium, as well as Dutch-language literature and culture. The main research areas at the Dutch section are Translation Studies and the Sociology of Translation, Children's and Young Adult Literature, Dutch as a Foreign/Third Language, and Contrastive Dutch-Swedish Studies.

Duties studies at Stockholm University (Position 70%)

The position of Senior Lecturer comprises teaching (maximum 70%), research, and some administrative duties (30%). The post includes teaching students from beginner and undergraduate levels through to advanced level. Evening teaching is a regular part of the position.

The successful candidate is expected to conduct independent research and actively contribute to the development of the subject area and its teaching. Although the Dutch section offers distance education, the Senior Lecturer is expected to work on-site at Stockholm University.

At present, the main duties consist of 70% teaching. This includes courses in Dutch as a foreign language at beginner and undergraduate levels; oral and written language proficiency; translation; Dutch-language literature, society and culture; contrastive linguistics; and academic writing. The position also includes examination and supervision of students at undergraduate and advanced levels.

Applicants are also expected to contribute to course development within section's recently established internationally oriented master programme.

In addition to conducting independent research, the position includes initiating new research projects. Applicants should explain in their application how their own research can contribute to and deepen the Dutch section's principal research areas (see above). Applicants are expected to be active in seeking external research funding.

Eligibility Requirements

To be eligible for the position, applicants must, by the closing date of the application period, have obtained a PhD in Dutch linguistics, literature, cultural studies, or a related field, or possess equivalent scholarly competence. Applicants must also have demonstrated teaching expertise in various forms of instruction.

Applicants must have demonstrated teaching competence through instruction at undergraduate and/or advanced level in linguistics and/or literary studies with a focus on Dutch, as well as in language proficiency courses in Dutch as a foreign or second language.

Both scholarly and pedagogical qualifications must be well documented in a manner that allows the quality of the teaching and research achievements to be assessed.

Applicants must possess the ability to collaborate effectively, as well as the overall suitability and competence required to perform the duties successfully.

This lectureship combines both research and teaching responsibilities. The languages of instruction are Dutch and Swedish, although teaching in English may also occur. Excellent proficiency in both Dutch and Swedish is required, as teaching takes place in both languages and, at undergraduate level, partly from a contrastive Dutch-Swedish perspective. Knowledge of Swedish is also required in order to contribute to administrative work.

Assessment Criteria

Particular importance will be attached to:

- Scholarly excellence demonstrated through completed research projects and publications in Translation Studies, foreign/second/third language acquisition, linguistics, or literary studies focusing on Dutch.
- Teaching excellence in courses in linguistics or literary studies within Dutch studies and in Dutch as a foreign/second language.
- Excellent proficiency in Dutch and Swedish.

Great importance will be attached to:

- Previous experience of digital and/or web-based teaching.
- The quality of both scholarly and pedagogical qualifications.
- The ability to connect one's work to the department's and institution's research areas.
- Documented ability to collaborate effectively with colleagues and co-workers.

Importance will be attached to:

- A successful record of planning, applying for, and obtaining external research funding.

Meritorious qualifications include:

- Knowledge of one or more of the other languages represented within the department.
- Administrative experience.
- Higher education teaching qualifications (or equivalent competencies acquired through other means).

Applicants who do not possess formal higher education teaching qualifications corresponding to at least 15 ECTS credits, and who are not deemed to have acquired equivalent competencies through other means, will be required to complete such training within the first two years of employment. Applicants claiming equivalent competence without formal training should explain in their application how these competencies were acquired and why they correspond to those provided by formal training.

About the Position

The position is permanent and corresponds to 70% of full-time employment. The starting date will be determined by agreement. A six-month probationary period may be applied.

The position includes professional development and research time in accordance with applicable collective agreements.
